Area Locksmith Has Been Accepted Into International Locksmith Organization

Finleyville, PA. – 6/20/11 – Tom Resciniti Demont – President Elect of the Associated Locksmiths of America (ALOA) has been accepted into the Society of Professional Locksmiths, an international network of forward thinking locksmiths dedicated to staying on the cutting edge in an ever-changing industry.

By joining the Society, Demont has access to a vast database of locksmith information, a global network of experienced professionals and an online continuing education system and proficiency testing that helps him keep his skills sharp while providing a much needed service to his community.

“Membership has its privileges; Demont now has access to years of valuable experience of locksmiths and security professionals from around the globe. We value each member and support their professional development with continued educational resources, training and peer review.” SOPL founder Tom Lynch said.

The Society of Professional Locksmiths is a collaboration of security professionals whose members strive to implement forward-thinking initiatives through education, networking and benevolent support.

Members benefit from rapid communication and response to their needs and desires from peer support and project development.
